We travel by train and then settle down at internationally renowned Schumacher College in beautiful Dartington, Devon.

The Schumacher College is a learning community with ecology-based master's programs and training courses. The emphasis is on experiential learning with the aim of teaching practical skills and strategic thinking to cope with the many challenges of the 21st century. World-renowned teachers, thinkers and doers teach there. During this training we meet people like Stephan Harding (Deep Time Walk), Mac Macartney (Embercombe), Nigel Topping (We Mean Business), Jonathan Dawson (Gaia Education), Mark Burton (Transition Network, Bristol Pound) and Satish Kumar (founder Schumacher College).

WHAT WILL PARTICIPANTS GAIN FROM TAKING PART?

- Principles of 'holistic economics' (integrated and system's thinking; full cost accounting and internalisation of externalised costs; etc)
- Guidelines for business – purpose, values, practices
- Positive and real examples of transforming business and organisations from the inside
- Skills and support to transform your own business and organisation
- A network of other allies who are currently transforming business from the inside
- And much more

"As we try and figure out what on earth we're going to do with this unravelling planet, the college is become a think tank for hope, a battery for positive vision!"

Bill McKibben, founder of 350.org

"This course gave me access, insight and experience in the latest systems thinking and practices which in turn developed my purpose and confidence in my next steps career wise - and life in general."

Hege Saebjornsen, Head of Operations for Sustainability Ikea, UK/EI
